An hour and a half to prove you're as good as gold

● Think hacky-sack isn't a sport? Just ask Steve Scrivner what he thinks.

It only took an hour and a half to show them you had a goal. You stood up from your seat and when they called your name you realized you had just gained another achievement. In an hour and a half you went from being an eighth grade somebody to a Freshman nobody, but you're on the rise again.

In that short amount of time you reached your goal, and faced new fears. You left with your promoting class undaunted by those in the outside world and now you work on a new goal. You're trying to get to the next hour and a half, the next promotion in this game known as life.

"Gold itself can be bought and sold, being as good as gold is priceless."

Here you will go through the same process. Sure there will be a lot more people, Pomp and Circumstance will be played by the band, and people will talk for what seems like a lifetime. This time graduation will be more formal, but in the end you were just trying to prove the same thing. This being, that you are as good as gold.

Maroon and Gold Standards

Homecoming was definitely where the action was October first. The theme for Homecoming was "Showdown at the Mustang Corral." The week was filled with maroon and gold Mustang spirit. It began with Monday - Hat and Shades Day; Tuesday brought Nerd Day, and Wednesday, Hawaiian Day. Thursday galloped by with Western Day, and Friday glittered with Maroon and Gold Day.

Classes and clubs spent the week constructing floats to compete in the Homecoming Parade.

ing Parade.

The freshman class won first in class floats with their running mustang and theme, "Show'em Up 'Stangs." Art Club crafted a gold rush with their float featuring several quick-draw cowboys and girls. The junior class won in the banner category. Class banners were displayed in the commons area for the student body to view.

On Thursday, the student body voted for King and Queen. On Friday the king, Ethan Taylor was announced at the spirit-raising assembly. Queen Tricia Morris was announced Friday night at the game against the Osage Indians. As usual, the game drew a crowd.

Amber Dwyer keeps step in the halftime show.

Craig Bond demonstrates the quick draws in the Art Corral.

Katie Miller shyly looks up as she realizes the nerd on Nerd Day is herself.

Beth Davenport and Tinsity George analyze their trek from the cafeteria to their class on Nerd Day.

Striving for Gold Models

Many students look up to celebrities as positive role models. They, too, are faced with life's everyday challenges. We see how they handle them and we learn from their mistakes. A recent survey held on students asked: Who do you feel is a positive celebrity role model? The results were:

"Drew Barrymore, because she turned her life around to become a role model for teenagers." ~Michaelyn Maples

"Shania Twain because she overcame her parent's death and is now a successful musician." ~Sara Roark

"Donald Trump because he helps out a lot of charities." ~Wes Hall

"Marilyn Manson because...He's not afraid to express himself." ~Matt Kretsinger

As you can see, role models come in many different forms. Singers, actors, sports figures, talk show hosts, and political advisors are all role models. They help shape our future as well as today's youth.

When asked a variety of questions about their favorite jeans, the boys chose Wrangler because of its history as a cowboy brand.

Students are always on the lookout for popular new styles. Although many of them wear jeans, they are also wearing other brands and styles. Levi's and Wrangler are some of the various styles of jeans made available throughout the world.

When asked about their favorite jeans, the boys listed the following as their favorite brands: Tommy, Levi's, INCO, Old Navy, Silver, Gap, Polo, Ecko, and others.

Turning the Golden Key

Along with today came a new, "I am" statement. It brought hope and the thought of a better tomorrow. However, without the knowledge gained in the most valuable days, it would not have been possible. Everyday people wake up and say things about how much they hate their job, boss, or even their house. If those people had only known what you know, "knowledge is power." The world was placed in your hands when you decided school was worth while. Hard work and determination have been your only hope of getting what you weren't sure you could have. Will-power has taken you everywhere. Perseverance and strength have become your middle link. In the everyday fight of life, you have gone up against Rocky Balboa. Sure you've been knocked down, but the key is that you haven't quit. For you are the future of America, and you have the golden key.

Leaves of Gold

The creation of a children's book ran as smooth as spun gold. This year, one of the English I classes traveled to the elementary school to work with Mrs. Raynor's class writing and editing an alphabet book. The high school students worked as role models and editors with the younger children. In part, the high schoolers enjoyed their service to the elementary class.

The final copy of the book was sent off and published as an actual children's book with illustrations, also created by the two classes.

The freshman class was not the only one to participate in a unique academic project. Various activities in other classes also took place in an attempt to make classes reflect real world situations.

Golden Rules of the Game

You play the game because something drives you to. You play hard because losing is not an option. To play any sport you have to have a competitive edge that exceeds your opponents. When the game is on the line, you have to come through with that extra "umph" to win. To stay competitive you have to dedicate your life to the game. There is a game within the game, it is a mental game. If you can't win the mental game, you can't win the physical game. To play the game, you have to be mentally and physically stronger, faster, and tougher than the opponent. If you don't have what it takes, you will never be in the game. Without the challenge, you may never be a part of the golden game.

The Man in the Arena
The motto of the arena counts gods the one who points out how the arena man stumble
er how the dice of deeds might have done them better
The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena whose face is marked with sweat and dust and blood who's lives valiantly who ears and comes short team and again who knows the great enthusiasms, the great devotions, and spends himself in a worthy cause, what he wins, knows the triumph of high achievement, and what he fails, feels its full weight, while those who sit in the arena, who do not know the victory nor defeat.

Racing for Gold

Soaring high! Sophomore Corby Edison completes his pole vaulting jump.

Erian Caine

Jessica Briggs

Myka Abbott

"It was a new era where many of the younger men stepped up."

"It was a lot of hard work but in the end it was all worth it."

"Track season went well, because we're awesome."

On your mark, get set, go! Boys and girls track race toward the gold. Kirk Henley broke many records this year. He flew past the Eldon High School record with a high jump of six feet and six inches at the Putnam track meet.

Henley also now holds the conference high jump record which was held last year at Osage. On the girls side

Elizabeth Platt set the girls pole vault record at Eldon and the Bonville Invitational meet.

Kirk Henley clears the bar to break the high jump record. He competed at state competition.

Girl power! Elizabeth Platt takes girls to new heights in pole vault.

Warming up! Erian Caine, Meghan Crismon, and Denac Webery at Osage.

Fan Support

The guy squad was a major support group during the basketball season.

Ernie Roe

"I've been to almost every game that Eldons played this year."

Avery Cox

"In the next two years I think all of our sports teams will be state contenders."

Caleb Burnett

"I like to go to the games because all of my friends are there, and we get to cheer."

This year was a very successful year in Eldon sports. The football team learned a lot on and off the field and the Basketball and volleyball teams made very good showings at district and conference play. The track team won quite a few events and set a couple new school and district records. The baseball and softball teams both had successful years too.

The golf team got themselves all the way state to bring home the place for the varsity and to claim state golf.

The cheerleaders are always looking for a way to cheer the teams on.

Diversity of Classes

People are a big part of high school. The different class levels can be very diverse. Freshmen start their first year of high school scared and hoping to get in with the upperclassmen. They don't know what to expect and find out that high school isn't really that bad. Sophomores are just wandering through the hall, hoping this year will pass by quickly so they can actually be upperclassmen. Some juniors think they're big, bad, and can "get away with anything". They also seem to become closer as a class. Seniors are on top of the world (they think). They are having fun while they can, and are making their last year as golden as possible.
